COURTESY OF ART HELPS HEAL

Life Specialist at Rush Hospital, takes art backpack deliveries.

Forpe said, "Backpacks are great for long-term patients who are serious about art or were taking art at school when their education was interrupted," Forpe said. "But the Healing Kits are for all patients, some waiting for a room, sitting getting a chemotherapy infusion, or in bed unable to deal with the volume of a backpack."

Forpe said the nonprofit delivers packages four times a year, and sometimes sneaks in something special for holidays like Halloween or Valentine's Day.

In order to keep the kids in art supplies, Forpe said the organization holds dozens of fundraisers, and her retiree friends do a "tremendous amount of donations." She also gets a helping hand from Conant students, who are often fundraising for one charity or another.

"Everyone knows this is real. There is no overhead and no staff to pay. I put the kits together and drive them to the hospitals myself," Forpe said.

And she does it all after suffering another setback with her hearing.

In 2019, she had another episode with her ear.

"It sounded like a siren was going off in my head. I just thought, no, no, no," she said.

This time 80 percent of her hearing was gone.

Vote for Shirley

Forpe's perseverance has been recognized by the Oticon Focus on People Awards, which recognizes outstanding people who are helping to show that hearing loss does not limit a person's ability to make a positive difference in the world.

The program, which has been running for more than two decades, selects winners in four categories: Adult, Student, Advocacy, and Practitioner. Winners in each category receive prizes and national recognition.

Forpe was nominated for the Adult category by a grade school friend.

"She's a writer," Forpe said, "so it must have been a good nomination."

People who want to vote for Shirley to win the award can visit OTICON.com/fop through Nov. 4.

While the recognition is nice, Forpe likes to remain focused on the kids and making sure they can keep their creative juices flowing.

"Everyone should do some art," Forpe said. "If you can understand organization of space and color, you don't have to be good at drawing or painting. If it is good you can trap people with your art and draw them to it. They will see something different every time they look at it. Be creative."
